

Activity 2.1:

Think about the last time you went to the doctor. Did the nurse or doctor ask you questions like the ones above? Answer the questions above for that occasion (or make up a new problem) on a piece of paper. Now team up with a fellow student. Decide who will be the doctor and who will be the patient. The doctor will attempt to determine the patient's chief complaint details by asking questions. Then switch roles. Remember, medical investigation involves asking lots of questions.
